Website Plan

- a. My target audience for my website is initially for friends and family. I think it'd be something cool that I could share with them and show what I created during this class. Even after the class, I could continue to evolve it and add more advanced things to it.
- b. My home page will contain links to other pages including About Me, Resume, Projects & Skills, and Hobbies. My home page will include everything for the About Me page and then it will have links at the top for Resume, Project & Skills, and Hobbies, which the user will be able to click on to them transfer them to that page. On the home page I will include things about me that will then lead to the other links like resume and project skills that follow along with my specific major.

- c. Users will use the links located at the top of the page to navigate to the specific area they want to explore. I included them in almost a “chronological order” that would allow them to advance going from left to right (or top-down). I’m trying to have a nice flow to the way the website works. So, they will see about me, then transfer to my resume, which will have projects I have done. Then, they will get to see more information on a few of those projects in the next tab. Lastly, they will see more personal information about myself with hobbies at the end.
- d. I have rough drafts of what each page will look like, however some changes may be made while developing the website if need be.

- e. I'm planning on making my pages as creative and aesthetically pleasing as possible. I want it to be eye catching and fun to look through/look at. I am really hoping to have fun with this and be able to be as creative as possible, therefore I want to get a head start on it, so I have time to work out any kinks and have time to do everything that I want to do with it. I want colors, cool fonts, different sizing, etc. I was even thinking about doing a specific theme for my website.
- f. I am hoping to share my website to my target audience and sharing with people, whether it be in person or over social media, especially with those who are into web development and enjoy coding in HTML. Therefore, reaching a bigger audience if they share the same interests as me would be ideal.
